More Than 2,000,000 Lbs. Of Fresh Produce Frozen And Canned This Season By Local Plant Including Beans, Blackeyes, Tomatoes and Okra

Circumstances of a sickly investment diverted the major personal efforts of Elmer Osking from the potato seed and otherwise—business in the Dakotas to the operator of a combination quick freeze and canning plant at Belle Glade, Fla., one of the very few, if not the only, combined operation in the industry.

"My prediction," says Mr. Osking, "is that within a few years Belle Glade will have a most active and well rounded quick freeze and canning operation in the industry. Located in the heart of the Glades area where nature has been magnanimous to the vegetable farmer, and where those items not grown here commercially may be obtained readily from the nearby vegetable areas, there's no reason why this plant shouldn't develop and fast."

"The quality this year is most satisfactory," he continued, "and that's the pay-off. Putting up a fancy quick freeze item gives the processor the profit. Lesser grades fight to break even with cost, but ability to use all grades enables us to cover the market."

"Less than 24 hours from the field," he said, "is the guiding rule for the plant."

LOCAL GIRLS RETURN FROM FLORIDA STATE

Suzanne Forrester and Jane Norris returned Saturday from Tallahassee, where they spent a week at Girls State, held annually on the campus of Florida State University.

Suzanne was elected a representative in the 1953 Girls State Legislature.

The girls learned the methods of democracy in action, elected their representatives to municipal, city, county and state governments as a method of gaining a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation and of learning the fundamental precepts of government.

Electing the girls carried out all the duties required under the laws and constitution of the State of Florida, including legislative session, introduction of bills and spirited debates in the House and Senate chambers in the state capital.

Early settlers in our southern states often prepared a tea-like drink from the dried and roasted leaves of yucca and dahoon holly trees.

1800 ACRE RICE

A few rice fields have shown blast, but this is confined to one type of rice, and does not involve a high percentage of the total crop.

Arrangements for the sale and handling of the current crop are being carried forward by the Co-op, and indications are that considerable additional acreage will be planted in Glades for the next rice crop.

Too Late to Classify

By Russell Kay

Every indication points to another record-breaking summer tourist season for Florida. Transportation companies have discovered that Florida can be sold as a summer playground.

Each summer more and more people visit the state. They have returned home and told neighbors and friends that Florida has plenty to offer the summer traveler, including a pleasant climate, cool nights, reasonable accommodations and entertainment to meet every desire.

Folks who used to scoff at the idea of visiting Florida in the summer time under the assumption that because it is warm in the winter it must be twice as hot in the summer, are now bowing to the Florida visit for this season of the year.

Long before most Florida communities awake of the fact that the summer promotion would pay off, alert Daytona Beach began selling itself as a summer resort. Each year it has increased its summer business.

Hundreds of new hotels, motor courts have popped up like mushrooms and still the area is hard pressed to provide accommodations for all who want to come.

Eastern and national airlines led the way in selling Florida as a summer resort. They popularized "playback" vacations and package deals that appealed to everyone.

Greyhound Lines and the "conducted tour" people hopped on the bandwagon and found the butcher, baker and candlestick maker were all prospects. Hotels and resorts that for years had made a practice of closing each summer began staying open.

They found it paid off. Rates were reduced for the transportation and hotel accommodations but the steadily increasing volume of business made it worthwhile.

Railroads finally woke up, and are now carrying their share of summer travelers and are advertising for more.

Florida's summer convention business has boomed. The chance to combine convention business with a wide variety of sport and entertainment, deep sea fishing, golf, swimming, boating and night clubbing while enjoying the comfort and luxurious living afforded by swank hotel and deluxe motor courts, made the convention bureau manager's job an easy one.

These conventioners, Shriners, Amoson Legion, and countless others who came here in summer expecting to "roast to death" found it so delightful they came back again and again and brought their friends with them.

Taking cognizance of the potential possibilities of developing more and more summer travel to Florida, the Florida State Advertising Commission has been budgeting more and more for this type of tourist promotion and has found it money well spent.

It will be able to do an even better job now that the appropriation has been increased.

Florida attractions people, Silver Springs—Cypress Gardens—and others, have never discounted summer possibilities and have conducted selling campaigns the year round, and their attendance records reflect the wisdom of this action.

Florida's greatest tourist revenue comes from motor tourists who drive their own cars to the state. This is why it is so important that we provide adequate highway facilities. If turnpikes and toll highways are the answer, the sooner we provide them the better.

Four species of fish in Florida classified as roughie include garfish, chub sucker, mudfish and gizzard shad.

LOCAL BOY TO LEAVE FOR SCOUT JAMBOREE

Lee Braddock will leave Saturday night, July 11, for the National Boy Scout Jamboree at Santa Ana, California. He will entrain at West Palm Beach, together with 22 other scouts from the Gulf Stream Council, with "Mac" Gaskin, Scout Executive and two assistants in charge. They will travel by special train along with the balance of the 50,000 scouts from all sections of the Nation, who will gather at a spot prepared for them by the Boy Scout Organization at the Irvine Ranch, one of the original Spanish grants in California. Along with the special train, the Railroad companies have gone "all out" for these scouts, arranging step-on-step-offing trips along the way, with the better part of a day allowed for each eight-seating trip to the Grand Canyon, Salt Lake City and Colorado Springs and Pike Peak.

Lee plans to leave a good supply of Belle Glade "informative" literature and "black gold" at each of these places, as well as having it available for free distribution in California by the thousands of visitors who will call at the encampment during their week of occupation.

The 6th District Band, which is composed of scouts from North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, will be on hand throughout the trip, and Lee, who has been assigned to the position of Solo Conductor, will be looking forward to a continuous jam session to California.

quick-freeze items, according to Mr. Osling, to insure that freshness the housewife expects in all quick-frozen foods.
With a 25,000-pound day capacity in the freezing plant, a 300,000-pound storage capacity, a million pounds of string beans were frozen during the '52-'53 season, with 25,000 cases of tomatoes canned and 135,000 cases of beans canned.

In order to make the operation a more nearly year-round one, Mr. Osling is experimenting with sweet potatoes to be canned as a candied yam-like product. Broccoli and brussels sprouts are also being tested. "I will be offering some answer to the midwinter off season" to December, January and February.

The tomatoes canned during the past year came mostly from the Homestead area, and the sweet potatoes, now in immediate prospect, to be come from Salerno, Indianatown and Ft. Myers area.

A most unusual circumstance this year prevented the heavy plantings of chrys in the Glades.

From North Florida and Georgia. For this freezing pack, a special variety of cantaloupe was used when seed were sought, it was found that the supply had been exhausted on account of earlier freezing. The cantaloupes from Oklahoma areas further north, the Glades this year has approximately 4,000 acres of blackberries. The yield is generally running 150 to 200 hampers per acre. Some of these peas are not being frozen, as other plants in the fresh market is taking quite a few of them.

Blackeyed peas are on the market. The item, which is being grown under contract, according to Mr. Oaking. The other items available are the open and competitive market.

Plans for the local plant are for an eight-line month operation, if fill-ins such as the cantaloupes and blackberries are obtainable for the three winter months, and potatoes cannot be obtained.

Mr. Oaking believes that he could use more beans if the labor were available for a two or three months. During the present summer season, about 80 people are regularly employed, with 120 in bean time, with 150 in pea time. The packing and freezing work is carried on.

SOUTHERN BELL

Soil conservation is changing Dixie's farming life to vigorous soils, making better returns.

Part of this changing picture are the telephone lines you see along the fields as they're bringing new convenience to farming. Over half a million rural homes have Bell phones and about 6000 more added each month.

That's the kind of progress you can see growing, prosperous Dixie!
